EXPLAINS DUTY OF STATE TO THE CHILD.

How to make good citizens out of wayward boys formed the theme of a talk by Judge Ben B. Lindsey of the Denver juvenile court last evening. An audience which nearly filled the Salt Lake theatre heard his address on "The State and the Child." Of course I am interested in other juvenile courts than that of my own city. There is a national committee on juvenile courts and probation appointed by the national conference of charities and corrections. I have the honor to be chairman of that committee. It has been a part of our duty to encourage and assist as far as possible the organization of juvenile courts in every state in the Union, and I am proud tonight that our sister state of Utah is not only not behind in this procession, but has suddenly gained an enviable place in the front ranks. This is not surprising, and in fact is just what I expected when last winter in Chicago I learned from one of the leaders in work for children in this country that he was going to enlist in the fight for the juvenile law for this great state. seven things:

(1) Authorize the construction of a concrete bridge over City creek at a point where that stream is intersected by the proposed road, said concrete bridge to cost not to exceed the sum of one thousand dollars.

(2) That you direct the removal of the rock crusher now being operated in City Creek canyon at as early a date as possible.

There is something so sensible and consistent with natural justice in the theory and practice of the chilren's court that it seldom meets opposition from any source except that schooled in the ways of force and violence, hate and despair. I refer to the average police department. This is not because the average policeman is inherently different from other people, but because his education in the ways of the jails and criminal courts is necessarily different. It is therefore from this source that most of the opposition has been encountered. I do not want to be misunderstood. Some of the most ardent advocates of the juvenile courts have been found among police officers. The greatest jailer of the world was John L. Whitman of Chicago. He is a great man. So is Jim Dawson of St. Louis. So is Scregant Bainbridge of San Francisco, all of whom are my warm personal friends, and every one of them will tell you that the jail for boys is the toboggan silde straight into hell. They will also tell you that the jails and criminal courts will do in twenty years. At the national conference in Portland, Ore., next month, I shall deliver an annual report, made up principally from letters from chiefs of police of the largest cities and towns in this nation. Without a single exception these men have declared in written statements that they believe in the principle of the juvenile court, and from every city in which it has been in operation for over a year they have likewise declared that crime among youthful offenders is on the decrease, and that it has their unqualified support. I do not know of a more noteworthy incident than this fact, for it shows the conversion of those schooled along different lines to the new scheme of correction.

Way Good is Accomplished. sible.

(3) That you terminate, as soon as is consistent with the public obligations already incurred, the leases under which the sand and gravel pits are now being worked in said City Creek canyon, and that no new leases of like kind be made so far as that particular locality is concerned. (4) That the powder house now in City Creek canyon be removed.

child's Good Main Object.

It is hard to understand how anyone return to the old system of the criminal courts. Of course, the juvenile law and return to the old system of the criminal courts. Of course, the juvenile law believes that no individual should be deprived of liberty without due process of law. But it should be understood that the juvenile court is a chancery court, and not a criminal court. It will never take a chilid away from its parents unto list states of the child.

The first consideration is, what is best for the child? The state stands superior to the parent only when the parent has demonstrated his inability to care for the child. You say your boy shall not go to school. The state says he shall. And if you refuse to give him an education you may go to jail. Just test this question, and you will soon find out who is boss.

This should not alarm any parent. On the contrary, it should be a source of consolation. The state will always protect the right of a parent to the custody of a child, so long as it is to the child's best interest, and the state believes that the right place for the child is in the home and in the boson of its mother, and the cardinal principle of the juvenile law is to keep the child in the home and correct it there, and to this end the probation system, the report system, the personal work and earnest effort of the court, the probation system, the report system. The personal work and earnest effort of the court, the probation system, the report system. The personal work and earnest effort of the court, the probation system, the report system. The personal work and earnest effort of the court, the probation system, the report system. The personal work and earnest effort of the court, the probation of its children. I trist that no legal quibbles or technicalities will ever compel it to retrace its steps. June 30, 1905.
To the Honorable President and Members of the City council, Salt Lake City, Utah:
Gentlemen—In the matter of construction plans for the additional water supply frem Big Cottonwood creek, I beg leave to inform your honorable body that the plans and specifications for the conduit and other work-necessary to convey the water from the mouth of Big Cottonwood canyon to the intake reservoir at the meuth of Parley's canyon are practically complete, and are now being put in form to be submitted to Mr. A. F. Doremus, the consulting engineer on this work.

Provision in Plans.

Provision in Plans. The plans provide, in a general way, for a conduit having a capacity of Mily cubic feet of water per second, which is as much as the combined flow of Big Cottonwood creek and Little Cottonwood creek and Little Cottonwood creek and Little Cottonwood creek furing the low season, with increased capacity after leaving Mil creek to take care of such water as the city may bereafter acquire from this additional source.

may bereafter acquire from this additional source.

The estimate made by my predecessor, Mr. George W. Snow, of the cost of the conduit, including the diverting dam at the mouth of the canyon and a dividing station near the Granite paper mill, was $35,000. Careful investigations indicate that the preliminary estimate was ample, and that the work can be done for this amount of money. It is contemplated in these plans that the entire flow of Big Cottonwood creek will be diverted at the mouth of Big Cottonwood canyon and be carried through the conduit to a point near the Granite paper mill, where a portion will be turned back into the original channel to supply the canal companies whose rights the city has not yet acquired. Such water as would ordinarily escape by seepage and evaporation between the mouth of the canyon and the Granite paper mill will be saved and used by the city.

Light Company Causes Delay.

Light Company Causes Delay.

The detail plans for this work have been held in abeyance for some time, awaiting the outcome of the bond issue and pending settlement of the rights claimed by the Utah Light & Railway company. In the recent franchise granted to the Utah Light & Railway company the clause under which the company agrees to convey to the city all its water rights and power rights below the company's lower house provides that the company shall have the right to build such regulating reservoirs as may be necessary on any of the lands to be conveyed to the city. Including a reservoir of one million cubic feet capacity immediately below the tail race of the company's lower power house. While the Utah Light & Railway company has not yet accepted this franchise, it is necessary to determine in detail just how the required room for the reservoir shall be marked out on the ground, so that it will be satisfactory to the light and railway company and still enable the city to divert the water at the highest possible point. As soon as this feature is settled and the consulting engineer passes on the sufficiency of the plans, contracts for the work can be let.

In the meantime I recommend that someone be authorized to negotiate for a right of way wherever the conduit is to run across land owned by private parties.

Respectfully yours.

GEORGE W. RITER, City Engineer.

ASKS TO BE ABSOLVED FROM RE-SPONSIBILITY.

The trouble between City Engineer George W. Riter and Colonel E. A. Wall, chairman of the board of public works, over the grading and paving of Brigham street was officially brought to the attention of the city council last night in a communication from the former, wherein he gave his version of the controversy. It was referred to the engineering committee on motion of Councilman Black.

gineering committee on motion of Councilman Black.

The communication from City Engineer Riter follows:

June 26, 1905.—To the Honorable President and Members of the City Council, Salt Lake City, Utah.—Gentlemen: Some serious differences having arisen between the engineering department and the board of public works with reference to the paving on South Temple street, an order has been issued by the mayor requiring the work of the engineering department to be modified to suit the ideas of Colonel Wall, because of the bond furnished by the latter to protect the city against the claims of abutting property owners.

The mayor's order has placed the engineering department in a more anomalous position than ever before, and I have accepted it under protest; and for the reasons given in my letters of acknowledgment, copies of which are here to attached. I have refused to share in the responsibility for the changes made by Colonel Wall. This refusal to share the responsibility will be understood better when the time comes to consider the contractor's bill for extras.

Declares Wall Repudiated.

Declares Wall Repudiated.

When I assumed the duties of the city engineer's office. I found a general plan for the South Temple street pavement, signed by Mr. Snow, my predecesson, and also by Colonel Wall as chairman of the board of public works. In April, after all the detail drawings and calculations had been made, and the contractor had resumed work Colonel Wall repudiated the plan bearing his signature and refused to proceed further under it. Because of the personal responsibility that he had assumed toward the abutting property owners I yielded to his solicitations and finally agreed upon a new plan, even though it meant changing everything from one end of the street to the other.

Under this new plan, it was agreed new plan, even though it meant changing everything from one end of the street to the other.

Under this new plan, it was agreed that between Second East and C streets the south side should have the maximum depth of fill permitted by the city council. It was also agreed that the pavement should have a general transverse slope of 4 per cent, except that the street car tracks were to be level from rail to rail, and the slope from the outside of one track to the outside of the other was to be concentrated in the space between the tracks. After following this plan in paving the north side, Colonel Wall suddenly decided, without notice to this department, to repudiate the plan so far as the south side was concerned, and gave peremptory orders to the contractor to remove such curbing as had been set on the south side of the street and to reset it higher and to make the south side higher all the way along. The effect of this will be to make the depth of fill on the south side between Second East and C streets in excess of the limit fixed by the city council. Among other changes on the north side of the street, the curbing once set around the corners of H and I streets was torn up and reset without regard to the official grades established by the city engineer and the city council. Other differences have arisen on the question of drainage, etc., which I believe are matters for the engineering department to decide by itself.

Asks to be Absolved.

I refrain at this time from discussing the wise or unwise expenditure of money in making these changes, the legal effect on the indemnity bond, or the creation of a possible loophole through which abutting property owners may resist the collection of the special paving tax. The situation resolves itself down to a plain question involving the dignity of the city council itself. If the city council is willing in this instance to permit its ordinances and instructions were made to be observed.

In submitting this matter to your honorable body. I wish to make it plain that personal animosity and high feeling is not an element. It is simply a question of which is the right thing to do. Respectfully submitted.

Frank Gritzhoffen is suing the Sisters of the Holy Cross hospital association for $35,000 in the district court, for failure to give him proper treatment while a patient in the hospital. He alleges that he was taken to the hospital July 25, 1904, to be treated for a disease of the eyes, and that he remained in the institution until September 11, 1904.

Gritzhoffen asserts in his bill of complaint that the attending physicians and surgeons ordered that he be attended by two skilled nurses and that in order to save his eyesight it was necessary to have his eyes cleaned and washed every twenty minutes with an antiseptic lotion or wash. Instead of two skilled nurses one incompetent nurse was assigned to wait on him, and she washed his eyes with the lotion or wash but two or three times a day, and never at night.

As a result of the failure of the nursing to come up to the instructions of the skilled doctors who attended him. Gritzhoffen says, it became necessary to remove the ball of one eye and the sight of the other has been so greatly impaired as to be practically useless to him.
